Bruce, I am sure you recall that during the last series of meetings on Treasure, the city hired Craig Elliot to do a concept of how Treasure could be sited differently. He created a design that had the buildings creeping up the mountain on the south side of the Town Lift--away from the neighborhoods and without a a building of seven stories. A 3-D model was shown at an Open House and was viewed far more favorably than the developer's proposal. Perhaps during or after the site visit would be a good time to explain this concept to the commissioners.
