Prospector Water Line Repairs Completed

Water Restored to Doc Holliday and Samuel Colt

Park City, Utah – May 25, 2012

Emergency repairs to the water line that services 50 households on Doc Holliday Drive and Samuel Colt Court are complete as of 3:15pm this afternoon.

City Water Manager Clint McAffee explained that "a pressure surge at the Quinns water treatment plant is responsible for the line break." Responding to concerns that other lines in Prospector may be affected, McAffee said that the issue was "not with the water line itself, but with the settings that controlled that particular line. Those settings have been adjusted and no further issues are anticipated."

As a precautionary measure the City provided households with bottled water for cooking drinking and other personal uses. A water trailer was also brought in for non-consumptive uses such as toilet flushing. McAffee added that "we know that the past 24 hours were an inconvenience for these households. We appreciate their patience during the repairs."

Households affected by the water line break are asked to run all cold water taps for at least five minutes. If after 5 minutes the water is not running clear, please continue running your water until the water runs clear. There is no reason for concern should it take more than five minutes.
